SilverNet work with Quadrant to help some of their clients.

The Challenge

To provide CCTV coverage to a town centre, that was starting to experience a crime spree.

The Solution

The scheme has been talked about on and off for nearly ten years, with town centre traders increasingly concerned that with most other towns having the ever watchful eyes, shoplifters and other criminals were starting to see Alton as a soft target. Further worry at the level of criminal damage and anti-social behaviour, particularly during evenings, finally prompted Town Councillors to bite the bullet and press ahead.

The five camera scheme, backed by Alton Chamber of Commerce & Industry (ACCI), East Hampshire Community Safety Partnership, Hampshire Police and other representative organisations, will see wireless technology used to broadcast the images to Alton Police Station, where they can be watched live or retrospectively when needed, before transmission on to the full-time monitoring suite operated by Winchester City Council. Here, they will be proactively monitored for seven days per week, twelve hours per day - the exact twelve hour window to follow the recommendation of the Police. The scheme has been designed to cater for up to ten cameras in all, so additional cameras can be added as and when needed, funds permitting.

The Technical Bit

The SilverNet solution was the SPRINT radio system. This allowed Quadrant to collect multiple camera transmissions along a daisy chain network and then use the STREAM radios for the backhaul to the police station.
